Marcia Coffey Turnquist, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 201 x 132 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .An award-winning, inspirational novel honored with a 5-star review and B.R.A.G. Medallion. Story summary: Something is odd about Grace. She has mismatched eyes, one dark and one light. She thinks she s seen God. When her mother dies, she begins to get letters from her, as if from the grave. The letters tell of her mother s life before she married Grace s father, in time, confessing fiercely guarded family secrets. I wasn t always a Preacher s Wife. I made mistakes along the way. Looking back, as a middle-aged woman, Grace relives those transformative years, coming of age in the 1960s as the daughter of The Reverend Thad Carsten and his much-younger wife, Sharon. When they move to a new neighborhood in Portland, Oregon, Sharon is healthy and Grace takes turmoil in stride: a new school, her backward neighbors, the simmering Vietnam War and political unrest. On the whole, life is sublime-until Sharon gets sick and dies. Then Grace s world turns upside down.Days after Sharon is gone, the letters to her daughter start coming, delivered mysteriously in the dark of night. Grace finds them-addressed to her-and devours every word, desperate to figure out who s delivering them. As she struggles with questions of loss and faith, she begins to butt heads with the preacher, increasingly focused on the mysterious messenger and her mother s letters. The handwritten pages arrive periodically as Grace matures, fostering a strange mother daughter relationship.Early on, the letters offer motherly advice, but increasingly they shift their focus to Sharon s early teens, eventually confessing a forbidden young adult romance. By then, Grace is desperate for the rest of the story,...
