Should he fail to do so, one of the dons told him, it would be not only disappointing, but absurd. Certainly the outlook appeared excellent. In addition to his very creditable college record, the young man s possessions included a sound body and a fine intellect. He had no vices and no fads; a fastidious temperament, rather than any definite moral code, protected him against the grosser temptations, athletic habits and a sense of humour against the more subtle ones. The son of a cautious, old-fashioned country banker, he had grown up in pure air and wholesome surroundings, hampered neither by riches nor by poverty. His interests ranged from Assyriology to the improvement of drains, and he could take as keen a pleasure in watching a well-played cricket-match as in reading Dante or listening to an organ-fugue of Bach.
