Preliminary Note on the Chemistry of Strophanthin. By Thomas R. Fraser, M.D., F.R.S., Professor of Materia Medica in the University of Edinburgh. Since my former communications, in which several facts relating to the chemistry of Strophanthus hispithm have been stated, I have completed a systematic examination of various parts of this plant, and more particularly of the seeds. Reserving a detailed description of the results of this examination, I propose now to mention only a few of these results in a brief form. The active principle, to which I have given the name Strophanthin, occurs most abundantly in the seeds. By a very simple process, consisting essentially of the separation of oil by means of ether from the alcoholic extract, I obtained some years ago a crystalline body having great pharmacological activity, and possessing the characteristics of a glucoside. In subsequent experiments, however, although the same process was followed, a well-marked crystalline product was not always obtained, and it soon became evident that this difference was due to some difference in the condition of the seeds which had been operated with. Thus, from seeds collected by the late Bishop Mackenzie more than twenty years ago, and also from seeds sent to me by Mr Buchanan of Blantyre, East Africa, in 1881, I had no difficulty in separating an active principle in the form of...
