Excerpt: . . . but just as Miss Wheeler was about to leave the dining-room, Polly plucked up courage to ask: Mrs. Temple, if you dont mind, could I--may I take up the tray to Mabel You, dear! Are nt you too small to manage that large tray and such a load of good things I m afraid it will be almost too heavy. Oh, no, it wont; I can do it; please let me; I d love to! said Polly, all in one eager breath. I ll have it fixed in two minutes, said kind Miss Wheeler. You carry the glass of milk, lest it should spill, and bring your own as well, and you and Mabel shall dine together. You can make believe you are lunching with a friend, and have great fun. And away went Miss Wheeler, who was never at a loss to find a happy solution to a question concerning little people. Make believe--how Pollys heart bounded at the words! All her short life she had been living in a land of make-believe, herself the sole inhabitant. Ting-a-ling-ling-ling! Is Miss Temple at home P asked Miss Wheeler, as she pretended to ring a door-bell at Mabels door. I think she is, answered a happy voice from within, for Mabel was used to the makebelieve pranks. Miss Polly Perkins has come to lunch with you, and has brought along the luncheon. I hope you wont consider it an unusual thing to do, but...
