Not illustrated. 1920 Excerpt: .overcrowding occurred in the houses inhabited by the foreign born, 174247--20 4 among whom it is customary to use all available space for lodgers in order to add to the family income. In this particular the infant mortality investigation gave but little indication as to the extent of such crowding because many of these boarding houses, especially the largest and most crowded, did not harbor small children. In two foreign tenement houses the preliminary canvass showed 149 persons living in 15 four-room tenements. Some of these families used their cellars as kitchens, but even allowing for this there were 149 persons in from 60 to 70 rooms, or more than 2 per room in the two houses. Most of these tenements were either subdivided for two families or used as boarding houses. Table XXII.--Live births during selected year, infant deaths, and infant mortality rates, according to number of persons per room. a Excluding infant born during selected year. Not shown where base is less than 100. CIVIC FACTORS. BIRTH AND DEATH REGISTRATION. The fundamental prerequisite to an effective program for reducing infant mortality is complete birth and death registration. Without complete registration the community does not know whether its infant mortality rate is high or low, whether measures for the safeguarding of infant lives are urgent, and whether measures adopted are effective. With the information as to causes of death the community can arrange a program suitable for its problems; the complete list of births is...
